

Lorenzo Trombetta

Negotiation and Power in the Middle East.

The roots of conflicts in Syria and the region

Mondadori University Press, Milan, 2022

Introduction

Acknowledgments

Transliteration notes

Index of maps, figures and infographics

Part one: Tools

1.1. Time

1.1.1. The arbitrariness of historiography and its tools

1.1.2. 'Give me the history and I'll control the world!'

1.1.3. When does (our) story begin?

What timeline of the Lebanese war?

1.1.4. To understand the present, you need a long-term view

1.1.5. The river and its tributaries: phenomena and their possible causes

1.2. Space

1.2.1. The construction of space. city, steppe, and campaign in Syria

Acres 250 years ago between agriculture and power

1.2.2. The different spatial dimensions

1.2.3. Four major spatial dimensions

The multiple dimensions of the story by Isma'il Khayr Bek (1822-1858)

1.2.4. Indistinct individuals in the mass: hic sunt leones?

1.2.5. Biographies and context

The Thousand Lives of Yusuf al-'Azma

1.3. Factors

Part Two: Power

2.1. Beyond the 'regime', the 'people', the 'local community'
What "central power" are we talking about?

2.2. Negotiation and dispute

2.2.1 Legitimation and incorporation, expansion and hegemonic contraction

2.3. Power in Syria

2.3.1. The articulation of power

2.4. Syrian governance

2.4.1. Environment and society

2.4.2. The steppe

Central powers and the Badiya between conflict and co-optation

2.4.3. The city, cornerstone of power

2.4.4. The countryside

The contraction of rural space

2.4.5. Land and power

The Dibli 'Afnan riots

The drought between land and water resources management

Part Three: Intermediaries

3.1. Resource withdrawal and patronage distribution

'The leader is close to the people without intermediaries'

3.2. The key features of the client-patron relationship

3.3. Corruption, informalism, vitamin Waw

Abu Ramez and the dark hidden corner of the State

The Reactionary Spell: as-silm al-ahli

Lebanon: the system does not need any capital control law

3.4. The role of intermediaries from 1660 to today

3.4.1. Between localism and Ottomanism

3.4.2. Hegemonic contraction, the emergence of urban factions

3.4.3. Ibrahim Pasha and the new 'grammar of power'

Reforms as a negotiating tool

Hasbaya, 1844: tax exemption for conversion

1840-1850, Damascus versus Beirut

3.4.4. From provincial councils to 'sectarian' massacres'

"By virtue of the imperial tanzimat..."

Parties, communities, and families: managing the urban power. The case of Tartus

The Aleppo incidents of 1850

3.4.5. 1860 and the emergence of the 'modern' Middle East

The events of 1860, a crucial turning point

3.4.6. Old and new fin de siècle intermediaries

3.4.7. Gouraud-De Caix and the birth of new political actors

'Minorities vs Majorities': sectarianism as a tool of power

3.4.8 Rural notables and the middle class challenge the urban aristocracy

3.4.9. The social pact in Asad era

The local administrative apparatus between 1971 and 1983 laws

Reforms between theory and practice: the law n. 107

3.4.10. Syrian power in the light of the armed conflict (2011-2021)

Areas controlled by Turkey

Areas administered by Kurdish forces

Dana and Sarmada, from displaced camps to cities

Raqqqa loyalist elites regroup in Hama

Round trip of a box of humanitarian aid

Terminology and content: 'sectarian', 'ethnic', 'communal'.

Ba'th party and warlords in the 2020 Syrian legislative election

Non-conclusive considerations

The roots of conflicts

Crafting narratives to manage power

Distorting mirrors and interpretive traps

The interreligious dialogue: the trivialization of complexity

How to get out of the castle of glass

Being aware of the complexity

Appendix: the incessant redefinition of hybrid identities

Najwa from Maharda

Sherin from Qamishli

Amer from Tartus

Bibliography

Timeline from 1660 to 2021

Governance terminology

Index of names and toponyms